説明

Hi

I'm sure that the following would be really useful:

to have the special category of the Issue Notes - Staff-only Notes, with Role-based access/visibility control. It would allow to put there information, hint, ets. that shouldn't be visible to specified Role (say, Customer).

Really eager to have it!

Thanks,
Dmitry

I totally agree with this feature usefulness. I see it as a 'private' attribute triggering note display for specified roles. The drawback is that nobody sees the same content.

This issue is duplicated in 1554, I think.

I also think this feature is absolutely necessary for companies that want to keep some notes on issues only visible to staff members and other notes (also) visible to clients.

I suppose it would consist of having a field "visibility" with values (private, public) on each note that is added to an issue. Then in roles, a permission to view certain visibility values (private, public, or both?). Related to #1554.

+1

It would be also useful to define the default setting (private, public) on per-project basis. It could permit to create project in which only visible issues' information for clients are description and state.

See features #337. This is private Issue. Please test it.

Private Issue Notes - second step (see #1554 too).

Private issue note which have been introduced in Redmine 2.2(#1554).

This issue can be closed.

Indeed.

@Toshi Maruyama I wouldn't agree this should be closed...

This is not a ticket for private notes, but "role-based notes"...

So, +1 for original request...

I am having such request, and we have like 3 roles, and they only want to see notes of other users of their own roles...

So, comment from Go Maeda 5y Ago is not appropriate...
