It would be great if revision histories could be viewed for specific branches in the repository tree as discussed over at http://www.redmine.org/boards/1/topics/show/861. I just migrated from Trac, and I really miss this feature. In Trac, you can specify a URL like http://trac.example.com/log/sandboxes/colan to show you revisions specific to the /sandboxes/colan part of the tree.

I'd like to see this too

It's really painful to see non related commits, for example if you take look at 0.7-stable branch here, there is no easy way to find what changesets belongs to this particular branch and which are just "noise" from other branches.

+10...

Will try to create a patch for it. See if I'm skilled enough but looking at the code it shouldn't be that difficult I think... ;-)

To me it seems Jean-Philippe Lang has implemented this feature in r2849:

- add latest changesets for the current directory when browsing the repository and a link to the full log

Will test it and update this issue according to the results...

See issue #3943; r2849 provides the basics for this issue's feature only.

I'm not working on this issue anymore.

Corrected issue-status.
