説明

Some global statistics (maybe even graphs) about Redmine usage would be nice, such as:

- total number of issues, open, closed...
- total number of documents, size...
- total number of wiki pages...
- number of users (by the way: another useful feature for a project manager would be to send a mail to all users of a project and for an administrator to all users of redmine, to warn about a server upgrade, shutdown... for example)

Just some ideas to make a project (Redmine) I like even better! :-)

(Redmine 0.9.0 on Debian 5.0.3)

I like this feature too.. :o)

I was thinking about building this a few weeks ago since I already have most of the code in another plugin. I think it should be built as a plugin first and then we can add it to the core if it's used a lot.

by the way: another useful feature for a project manager would be to send a mail to all users of a project and for an administrator to all users of redmine, to warn about a server upgrade, shutdown... for example)

You can use my [[PluginSystemNotification|System Notification Plugin]] for that.

Thanks| I tried to install the plugin, but it doesn't work for me:

I can see it into the plugin list as "Redmine System Notification plugin V.0.2.0", but if I try to enter into "System Notifications" in the "Administration" section I get:

"Page not found. The page you were trying to access doesn't exist or has been removed."

Maybe we have to open another issue to talk about this?

Bye,

Matteo

Any update on this feature request? Usage statistics would be awesome because it will help justify the use of redmine and allow us to identify legacy pages.

A way to list unlinked wiki pages would be nice too.

I added some relations. I think those two tickets (#4864 and #2181) would complement each other greatly.

Any progress?

or simply use and update this: https://github.com/luisfontes19/redmine_stats/

Is this plugin available for redmine 3.0.7 ?
