Though we need to use the % done field in Redmine, there is no reason not to have it work automatically for certain statuses. For example a "New" issue could be set automatically to 0% and a "Resolved" issue could be set to 100% done. The user could always change pertentages if needed...

Moreover, that would be an excellent way of avoiding 0%-closed issues.

Maybe the "Issue Done Ratio Both":https://github.com/vaz/redmine_issue_done_ratio_both plugin (provides a base to extend it to) fit your specific need. It might be worth looking at it...

This feature was implemented in r3151.

Isn't it what you need?

Mischa The Evil is right: I was talking about the same functionality provided by the "Issue Done Ratio Both": https://github.com/vaz/redmine_issue_done_ratio_both plugin

+1

Since the plugin mentioned above does not seem to exist any more, I built "a new one":
