説明

There does not seem to be a way to hide users belonging to the same project from seeing each others. I am looking for a way to limit that users can see only their own issues, and only themselves. Now if they create a filter, and choose eg. Author, they get the list of all users in their project. The same goes for the standard summary-report found at projects/incoming/issues/report

I can acquire this by removing permissions for issues via the role-editor. But then the user can't see his/her own issues :-(

In the role-editor it would be great to have a third option in the "Users visibility" combobox:

All active users
Member of visible projects
-> None

related to #17747 ?

I learned from the #redmine irc-channel that redmine.org is configured partially in a way that I'm trying to achieve. When logged in, i see on the <http://www.redmine.org/projects/redmine> page only the "Administrator" and "Contributor". The other millions of users i can't see. How is this configured?

Redmine is a public project, all non-members (like me and you) have the same (non-member) role. Only members are listed in the user-boxes (and also in other places, like issue summary: <https://www.redmine.org/projects/redmine/issues/report>).

This means f.e. you can't search for a specific non-member author (other than yourself).
